Formality of Ballot Papers

GUIDE

Formality of Ballot Papers

The formality requirements for Local Government elections differ from those of State and Federal parliamentary elections.

Examples of formal and informal ballot papers are on the following pages.

Giving Effect to the Elector's Wishes

The key words in the legislation refer to accepting a ballot paper that 'clearly indicates the elector's wishes'.

Marking of the Ballot Paper

In an election where one office is to be filled and two or more candidates are named on the ballot paper an elector is to mark the ballot paper in accordance with regulations, so as to indicate the candidate named on the ballot paper who the elector wishes to be elected.

If two or more offices are to be filled at the election an elector is to mark the ballot paper by placing a tick in the box(es) opposite the name of the candidate(s) for whom the elector wishes to be elected.

Initials and Other Markings

A ballot paper is not rendered informal because the voter by choice reveals their identity.

Returning Officer Decision is Final

The final decision on whether a ballot paper is to be accepted rests with the Returning Officer.

The Returning Officer will refer to the Electoral Commissioner's guidelines as well as the Act and Regulations, but the determination of validity will always be circumstance specific.

The physical appearance of markings on the ballot paper may well influence the Returning Officer's decision on the formality of the ballot paper.
